

Please join us at the 25th annual James Monroe Lecture:

What We Know that Ain't So: Myths of the War of 1812

Monday, September 24, 2012, 7 p.m.
University of Mary Washington
Great Hall, Woodard Campus Center

*Presented by Don Hickey, Ph.D.
Professor of History, Wayne State College*

In this engaging lecture, Professor Hickey explores the leading myths and misconceptions of the War of 1812. A question and answer period will follow in which audience members are invited to challenge these views and to offer their own myths of the war.

An award-winning author and Johns Hopkins book series editor, Don Hickey has written six books and more than 50 articles on the War of 1812. He is best known for The War of 1812: A Forgotten Conflict, 187 Things You Should Know about the War of 1812, and The Rockets' Red Glare: An Illustrated History of the War of 1812. All three titles will be available for sale and autographing at the lecture.

A reception will follow. Both are free and open to the public.

Sponsored by the board, friends, and staffs of the following UMW departments: James Monroe Museum | Center for Historic Preservation | Department of Historic Preservation | Department of History and American Studies
